The Aurora

First published in 1927, The AURORA has a long tradition of providing information that and inspires the membership of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Inc., its affiliate organizations and the public about health, educational, social and political issues that directly affect the family and women specifically.

The AURORA* also highlights achievements of individual members and chapters that give life to the sorority's slogan, "Greater Service, Greater Progress."

The AURORA* strives to keep abreast of changing needs and interests of its audience. Sigma women are college educated professionals, executives, entrepreneurs and matriculating college students that are redefining the role of women in today's society.

The AURORA*'s readership is estimated to be more than 10,000 with free distribution to the membership, over 200 colleges and universities, the National Pan-Hellenic Council – which represents the other eight historically African-American sororities and fraternities – members of the National Inter- Fraternity Council and various national libraries and civil rights organization, as well as to individual subscribers.
